ARMS CONFERENCE NAVAL RATIO MAY BE DESTROYED

United States Must Carry Out Modernizing Program, Experts Say, Or Be Considered Opposed To Spirit Of Treaty

NO ACTION POSSIBLE TILL PRESIDENT GIVES DECISION

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 24—Five, Five, Three the naval ratio, the foundation stone of all naval agreements growing out of the Washington Arms Conference will be utterly destroyed unless the United States carries out her program to modernize the American fleet, is the opinion of naval experts, ac it has taken shape after careful study of the whole subject. Probably no decision will be reached until the matter is put before President Harding with whom rests final decision whether the United States goes ahead with the modernization program authorized by Congress. Unless this is done such course will be interpreted as opposed to the spirit of the treaty by Great Britain. Secretary Denby of the Naval War College and General Board computed under certain circumstances the British fleet hold the advantage of the United States as high as twenty per cent.

JUDGE MORISON HOLDING COURT

Started First Term At Huntsville Last Week—Goes To Tazewell Monday

Judge Morison held his first term of circuit court at Huntsville last week and is at home this week. He begins court at Tazewell Monday.

Judge Morison believes his greatest concern is to stop the making and selling of whiskey and the carrying of pistols, as with these things out of the way he will have very little trouble. He made his views clear to the public. Judge Morison is said to have delivered an able charge to the grand jury, consuming some forty minutes, which was effective. He is quoted as saying among other things:

"It is not necessary to say to men of Scott county that is is against the law to kill, rob, carry pistols, sell and transport whiskey, for you know this. But our greatest concern is to stop the making and selling of whisky and the carrying of pistols. These things out of the way, we will have very little trouble." In concluding his charge, he said: "I now give you generally in charge of all the criminal law of the state that I have not specially referred to. You have the attorney general with you, whom I have know for a great many years to honest and capable. He wil advise you as to anything you may not understand, or you may ask the court for special instruction at any time."—Cumberland Gap News.

4 COUNTY SCHOOLS NOW BEING BUILT

County Teachers Assured Salary Increase Next Year—Four Schools In Session Now

There are four county school buildings under construction at the present time. One of them at Shamrock, on Stony Fork above Middlesboro, will be a two room structure and will cost $2,400. All of the buildings will be frame and are to be completed by May 1. The other three will be constructed at a cost of $1,200 each and are to be located, one in East Pineville, and two at the head of Brownie's Creek, on the Harlan road. These latter two will each have two rooms also.

The two schools on Brownie's Creek are being built following the consolidation of five schools. There will be about 100 pupils in each school.

Camie Wilson, county school superintendent, assures the county teachers next year at least a $10 monthly raise because of the state aid received from the inheritance tax in the Bingham estate. It raised the amount per capita from $6.10 to $8. There are 110 teachers in Bell county.

Four of the county schools which were not in session from July ninth January, are holding their six months terms at the present time. The schools were closed because of the scarcity of teachers.

They are Fork Ridge, with C. C. Smith as teacher, and seventy-three students in atendance; Turner, near Fern Lake at Middlesboro, with Miss Sarah Fuson as teacher and sixty-four pupils; Sutty Hill, with T. S. Davis as teacher, and seventy-five pupils in attendance; and Laurel Hill with G. W. Rhodes as teacher and forty pupils in attendance.

These schools will close in July.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CAMPAIGN RULES

Local Organization Cooperate To Bring Million Into U. S. Sunday Schools May 6

The local Sunday School organization is at work now getting recruits for the 1923 Go-To-Sunday-School-Day, May 6, wkhen one million persons are expected toatten d Sunday School in the country. The following campaign rules have been drafted:

1. One of the most important things of the campaign is to secure regular and punctual attendance of all Sunday School pupils. There is a tendency to repeat actions which bring satisfaction. Actions repeated become habits. Make being on time a pleasing experience to your pupils.

2. This is the goal for every good Sunday School teacher. Some times this goal is vague and indefinite. All teachers need to become skilled workers. Give to each of your teachers a definite opportunity for training for the definite task of winning pupils of his class to Christ. Religions education is the primary means of Evangelism.

3. Christ's command is to teach all people. Surely there are some near your church who will not be taught unless you bring them into your school. New members will be secured one at a time. Seek them among the members of your church, the members of the families in any way connected with your church, the friends, neighbors and acquaintances of the members of your school.

Perhaps the very best possible way for increasing your membership would be enlisting members for the 1,000,000 Club.

You will need from two to ten Captains. Write at once for the number of enlistment blanks you will need and enclose ten cents for each Captain If you desire the Club buttons for your 100,000 Club members. Buttons are not necessary, but they are attra tive and helpful.

4. Individual work for individual members is the best way of building up the membership of a Sunday School. More than this is needed. The Go-To-Sunday-School Day movement is a great advertising campaign. Make the most of it. You cannot have every person in your community a member of the Sunday School this year. Perhaps you can have every person in your community attending Sunday School or May 6th. Without doubt, you can invite every one in your community to attend Sunday School. Make the invitation as gracious and persuasive as possible.

5. Having got into this campaign with a definite object for regularity, punctuality, evangelism, advertising and membership increase, the school would be in flourishing condition by May 6th, and ready for further improvement along educational lines. Measure your school by your denominational standard. Measure your school by your own ideas. Take stock of the abilities of the people in your church. See that each finds his right place of service in the church's educational program.

GOLF ABOUT ONLY SPORT TO LACK STANDARDIZED BALL

Golf lacks one feature that is definitely fixed in practically every other sport, a standardized ball.

In many record breaking rounds various kinds of balls are used, varying slightly in size and weight. There is no doubt that lack of standardization offers a chance for argument.

If all matches were played with a ball of the same weight and size as is the case in baseball, records made would be on an equality basis.

Recently England has started a movement for a standardized ball. The movement is not meeting with much favor among American pros, who feel that England is seeking to get a decided edge in establishing weight and size.

The English pros, particularly the veterans, seek to have a ball considerably lighter than the one used in this country by our best pros as the standard ball of golf.

The reason, according to our professional players, is that with a light ball, which will carry just so far, the veterans are able to get just as much distance as the younger players. This is not true with a heavier ball which has greater carrying qualities.

It is possible, however, that the weight question may be threshed out and a standard ball adopted soon.

SPRING ATHLETICS FOR HIGH SCHOOL

Baseball Practice Starts Monday—Track Team to Be Developed Here

Efforts to organize a baseball team for M. H. S. will be made when about sixteen of the boys will go out on the field Monday afternoon for the first practice of the season. The boys are full of enthusiasm and anxious to begin practice, and but for the fact that two good pitchers are ineligible to play this year on account of falling behind in their studies, an excellent team would be assured.

Prof. R. E. Porter who has charge of the athletic program says that he has received inquiries from a number of high schools in this section of Kentucky and in East Tennessee in regard to scheduling games with their teams. A great deal of practice will be necessary before the M. H. S. team will be able to meet other players. The pitcher, from the present outlook, will have to be entirely made from raw material before the players develop into a team.

Track team will be another feature of spring sports that will engage the attention of some of the boys Monday. Prof. Porter says there are six young men who will begin this work. Efforts will be made to arrange meets between the track team of this school and other similar institutions of the section, including L. M. U. If they make a good showing they will probably enter the state tournament.

Two weeks of spring football practice will also begin Monday. Members of last season's team will play and instruct the players of next season.

Practice in each of these sports will take place each afternoon, the East End athletic field being used for the baseball practice. With more than two months before the closing of the school term, Prof Porter hopes to develop baseball and track teams that will be a credit to the school and to the city.

Lumber dealers report that business is already improving and that several houses are in th ecourse of construction in and a round Middlesboro.

CHARLES I. DAWSON FOR GOVERNOR

That Attorney-General Charles I. Dawson intends to announce his candidacy for the Republican nomination at the banquet tonight is an established fact which is causing more than a little gratification and satisfaction among his many adherents in this section. Because of the splendid record he has made in county and state office, Mr. Dawson is one of the most popular men this section has ever had, and his popularity extends far beyond the ranks of his own party.

The general trend in the Republican party the past few months has been toward Dawson as their logical candidate for governor. Other men have been suggested and talked of, other issues than those for which Mr. Dawson stands have been brought to the front, but through this all has run a strong current, preeminently Dawsonian, and this current will reach its culmination at the banquet tonight.

The attorney-general's popularity in this southeastern section rests primarily on the record that he made as Bell county attorney, which office he held ten years. Previous to Mr. Dawson's advent Bell County had held a most unenviable reputation throughout the state for lawlessness and wickedness, a reputation which has not yet been shaken off. Mr. Dawson began his work in earnest and prosecuted his cases with an intensity and fearlessness that gained him unanimous respect. During his ten years' service criminal conditions in the county were cleaned up in a way hitherto unprecedented.

His record as attorney-general has been equally satisfactory. This had been a position through which the governor was wont to pay off his political debts by employing lawyers over the state. Mr. Dawson dispensed with this and has, during his service, saved the state between $50,000 and $100,000 useless expense. In one instance, the Bingham Inheritance case, he handled the prosecution so well that he recovered four million dollars for the state. Besides this able prosecution, he has drafted all of the important measures brought before the Kentucky legislature.

Because of his ability and because of his remarkable public record, Mr. Dawson has come to be considered by Kentucky Republicans as the proper candidate for governor. Announcement of this confidence in him will be made tonight Exemplification of their confidence will be made, they feel sure, in August and again in November.

WHEN GIRLS SHOULD MARRY

Young girls have not the judgment and discretion to choose their life mates.

The inexperienced things should be locked up until the age of twenty to prevent their marrying prematurely and making failures of their lives.

So declares a New York jurise, Judge Ford by name.

What do you think of this, girls?

This obiter dictum from the American bench has arrested attention in France. In France, as we have always understood, girls have their mates selected for them by their elders. At least, and that is the recognized social laws.

Judge Ford's views have caused much argument is Paris we are told in a cable to the New York Times from the French capital

Mme. Colette Yver, a prominent French author and feminist, said:

'If one merely based an opinion on birth statistics, it is certainly advisable that girls should marry at the age of eighteen. But other considerations must be taken into account. The physiological aspect of the race's future is not everything. The phychological importance of happiness is enormous. And happiness is an essential condition to assure the nobility of the family. Young girls full of dreams are likely to be disillusioned considerably when brought into sudden contact ith the hard facts ofw life through an early marriage.

"A girl having reached the age of twenty-five, on the other hand, is probably well prepared for anything. And conditions have changed since the days of Balzac. Today girls between twenty-five and thirty are young and make the best wives.

Mme. Francois Marsal, wife of the former minster of finance, thinks there is a good deal of truth in Judge Ford's theory, because until twenty years or more girls very seldom have sufficient judgment to make a judicious choice of a husband, which is an essential condition for founding a family.

The Dowager Duchess d'Uses, on the other hand, thinks it is not a question of age at all, but a matter of education, training and bringing up

"If a girl has been taught to exercise sufficient judgment at eighteen, she declares, "there is no reason why she should not be able to exercise it a few years later."—Knoville Sentinel.

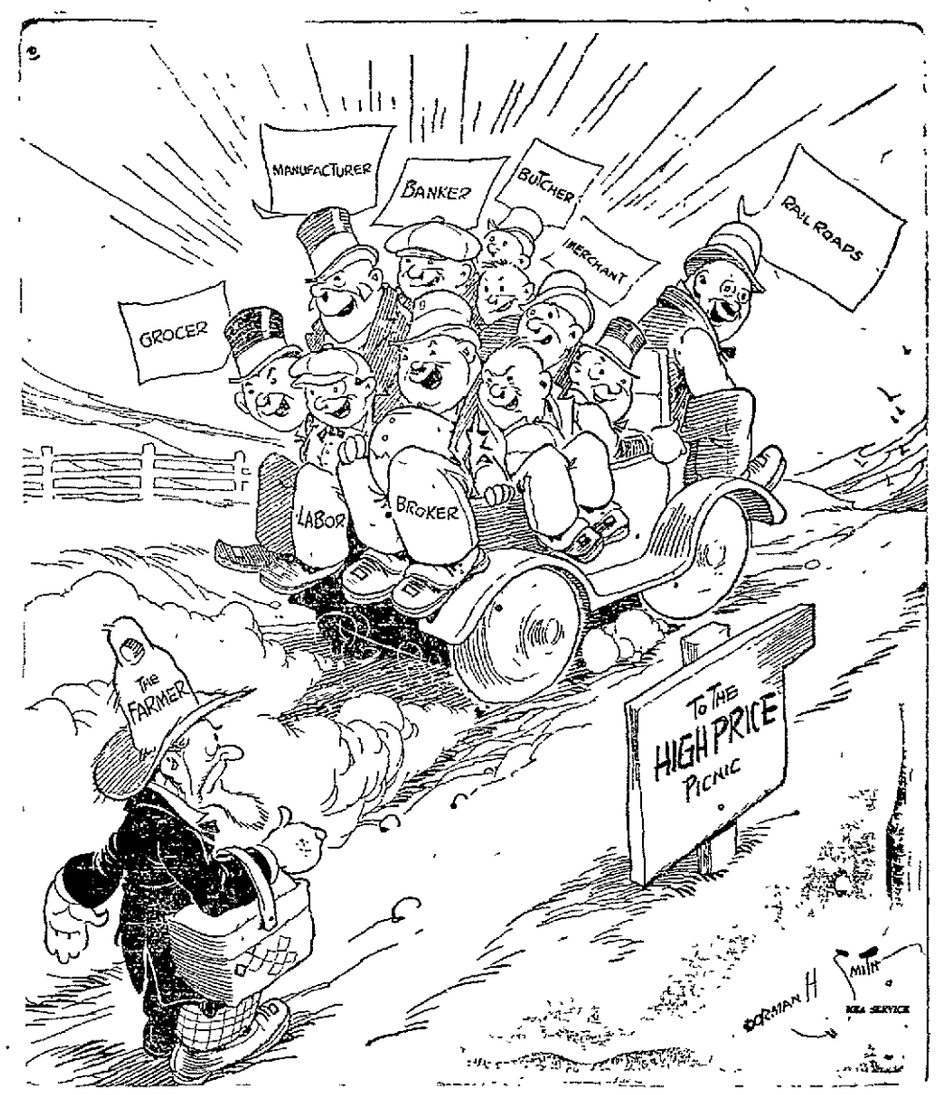
LOOKS LIKE SOMEONE WOULD HAVE TO WALK AGAIN



The Tangle

AN INTIMATE STORY OF INNERMOST EMOTIONS REVEALED IN PRIVATE LETTERS
Copyright 1923 -NEA Service Inc

HER OLD FIANCE, JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT, WHOSE ENGAGEMENT TO LESLIE HAMILTON HAS JUST BEEN ANNOUNCED

MON CHERE JACQUES:

The papers tell me that very soon you are going to marry. Of course, when I read the notices of all our old associations it brings up and I wonder—yes, Jacques, I really wonder—if you will ever be as happy with any other girl as you were with me. We were blissfully happy, ne' c'est pas?

You have never mentioned me to this Miss Hamilton, I expect, but I am sure that to forget me you will not be able nevertheless; and sometime when things go wrong and wifie understands not, don't you know that old saying Jacques, "My wife is a lovely woman, but she does not understand"—well, when wife does not understand, perhaps to someone you will come back and you may tell again to her that her greatest charm is understanding thorough.

We quarreled so long ago. What was it about, Jacques? Silly it was. I know, and that you would come back immediately I was sure; but you did not, and too proud I was to ask you to return. And now, some other girl into your life has come.

You will be happy I sincerely hope, if only in that monotonous way which all married people fall into who claim to be happy. Possibly it is not for human beings to dwell on the mountain tops of love the air is too rarified.

But I am getting romantic; to be very sensible I had intended and to tell you that a bundle of letters I have tied up carefully in one of my bureau drawers.

I wonder how you would like them for a wedding present? Very interesting reading they would make for your wife, Jacques! I read one of them this morning. It made me feel so unhappy. I shed a few tears. And very well you know that there is nothing or no one that is worth a tear in this world! But to realize this you have to go through affairs like yours and mine, wonderful dreams dreaming, and to stern reality wake up as I did when of your coming marriage I read.

To this letter what will you say? Whatever it is Jacques, you cannot from the fact get away that once I to you was the only woman in the world. Hundreds of times you have told me that better than life itself you loved me. I am still always to you the same— PAULA.

LETTER FROM JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT TO HIS FRIEND SYDNEY CARTON

DEAR SYD:

I am sending you the S. O. S. sign, as you will readily see when you read the enclosed letter. Isn't it a fright? Isn't it just like that little French devil?

From it I can't tell whether she is trying to blackmail me or buying my letters from her, or whether she thinks I am marrying to spite her or as soon as I know her feeling toward me I will give up Leslie and fly to her again.

What in the devil is she getting at, Syd?

I am much worried, I can tell you, for in the same mail with that letter I received one from Leslie asking if I had ever told another girl I had loved her—so you can see what a predicament I will be in if she ever finds out about Paula.

Good Lord, why do girls always want to be the first girl a man loves, when if she only knew it they are lucky to be the last?

For heaven's sake, Syd, come on over and help me out with this. I want you to go and see this girl; see what she is trying to get at, and above all else, get those letters away from her.

What a fool a man makes of himself when he puts his silly vaporings upon paper? I did not mean it at the time, and I certainly do not mean it now. Why Syd, if anything should happen that I should lose Leslie now, I think I would commit suicide. Come over right away if you can; I don't want to write to Paula; I don't want to put any more compromising stuff on paper, but I want you to go to her and find out just what her game is.—

Haven't much time to explain, old boy, and I know I'm asking a lot of you; but remember I would do as much for you under the same circumstances.

Yours in great trouble—JACK.

TELEGRAM FROM SYDNEY CARTON TO JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT

Impossible for me to get over before Thursday. Sit tight and dont worry. Thing I can fix it for you. Anyway, you know that will do my best. I can't help saying I told you so. There I've ducked; don't try to hit me again. I'll help you out of it, of course; but I can't help grinning. You were always so cocksure.

ALADDIN

When I was a beggarly boy,
And lived in a cellar damp,
I had not a friend nor a toy,
But I had Aladdin's lamp;
When I could not sleep for the cold,
I had fire enough in my brain,
And builded with roofs of gold
My beautiful castles in Spain!

Since then I have toiled day and night,
I have money and power good store.
But I'd give all my lamps of silver bright
For the one that is mine no more;
Take, Fortune, whatever you choose,—
You gave and may snatch again;
I have nothing 'twould pain me to lose,
For I own no more castles in Spain!

If the mark of a king is his crown, the mark of a gentleman is his hat, and how he handles it. The hat has a social language all its own. There is a suitable hat for every occasion and a suitable style of hat for every head. A man's method of lifting or doffing his hat may be as expressive of gentility as his bearing in a ball room

THE MAN'S HAT

A man takes off his hat when riding with a woman in an elevator or a club, hotel or apartment or store; when he stops to speak to a woman on the street when he must wait for a funeral to pass, or when the national colors are passing, and when the national anthem is played.

A man merely lifts his hat as a conventional gesture to strangers, whenever he must recognize their presence.

A man lifts his hat when offering a woman his seat in a car and again when she thanks him—which she should invariably do.

Whenever a man unavoidably obtrudes on a woman as when meeting her in a narrow passage where he must make way, he lifts his hat.

A man lifts his hat and bows when meeting acquaintances or friends, the graciousness of his bow and the cordiality of his smile being the measure of the impression he would create.

It's bad manners for a man to keep a cigaret, cigar or pipe in his mouth when he lifts or doffs his hat or bows

A Living Memorial To Lincoln

By Frederick J. Haskin

WASHINGTON, March 24.—A living memorial to Abraham Lincoln is now receiving public attention. Volumes have been written about the beautiful marble tribute erected to the Civil War president in this city. But the world knows very little about the Lincoln Memorial University at Cumberland Gap, Tennessee, wher boys and girls from the Appalachian Mountain district are being educated in the way that it is supposed Lincoln would approve.

This memorial university is a unique institution. To understand its purpose one must first imagine the strange situation that exists in these mountains of Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee.

There are 6,000,000 mountaineers in the southern Appalachian region. Many of them live in log cabins that boast no more modern conveniences than did Abraham Lincoln's boyhood cabin home. While we take for granted the telephone, electricity and radio, these mountains hide away millions of people living a primitive pioneer life.

A woman who walked three miles across mountain trails on a trip to town how to make a railroad journey of 100 miles in order to avoid walking home. Many of the mountain folk, even more remote from civilization than she, live all their lives without seeing a locomotive or an automobile They are separated from the twentieth century not by great stretches of miles but by barriers of rivers, mountains and wilderness country. Civilization long ago passed the Appalachian mountains in its journey westward but it took the easier routes and left the mountaineers isolated.

People Real Americans

These people are "real Americans" as we often use the term. Their ancestors were sturdy pioneers when Boone was cutting his way west. Some of the pioneers who started across the mountains in those days stopped in the mountains because of sickness or discouragement. Their descendants today sing the old English songs, cling to the old folk lore handed down by tradition They use a gun with the same casual hot-headedness that was the accepted code when their forefathers left civilization. They are twentieth-century Americans and some of them have never seen the American flag.

The chances of getting an education in many sections of the mountains are no better today than in Lincoln's time The illiteracy of the region as shown by draft figures was more than 80 per cent. And yet, from the mountain country have come striking characters like Lincoln, Faragut, Sam Houston, William McAdoo and James Polk and Cassius Clay the democratic diplomat who refused to take off his hat to the Czar of Russia unless the czar would doff his in return.

Education Is Their Dream

To get an education is the dream of thousands of the mountain boys and girls. Some 800 students are enrolled at the Lincoln Memorial University at a time, but there is alays a long waiting list.

In one small batch of letters is an application from a boy who says "Am highly recommended as a sober and honest boy, but am poor and want to go to a school that I can work my way through" A mountain girl in an appeal for a chance to work for their tuttion closes by saying, "If you have work for me to do let me no at once, and I will come, for I shore would like to be in school."

And a father writes for his son to say, 'I hate for him to grow up and not be learned anything I know he ought to have an education I am a poor man and no wife to help raise him."

Some of the prospective students do not wait to write, They walk miles to the university and confidently expect to be taken in and given a chance to earn their way. One boy who was told gently that the college had no room for him just then said, "I didn't come down here to board. I came to get an education I can sleep on the foor!"

School Lincoln Would Favor

The school to which all these eager applicants come is such a school as Lincoln would have wanted for the mountaineers It has prepatory courses and maintains a grammar school for students "starting in" and for children of the neighborhood. The college courses lead to degrees as in other colleges—bachelor of science, arts and music. There is no pretense of hollow culture and theoretical learning Every course is applied. The university teaches forestry on its own 2000 acre tract. Sciences are taught from the point of view of their practical application. It is said of the finished architect but he can draw a school that a graduate may not be a working plan for a practical modern lidairy, and then build it nd operate it himself.

Farm Work Finances Many

The big blue grass farm tract serves as the chief means of helping students to earn their tuition. Few of them have sufficient funds to get through the year without earning some money for themselves, but in this college where students come for study rather than for the social activities work is looked upon neither as a hardship nor a disgrace. The students run a creamery where best made butter is produced and sold. Some of the girls sew and some do domestic work.

"The Lincoln Memorial university is the only hope of the people for 150 miles in any direction from its doors," says Dr. John W. Hill, chancellor of the university.

Dr. Hill is now in this city raising a $5,000,000 fund to extend the work. He says that he has given his life to the study of Lincoln and to the application of the Lincoln principles to education, civics and everything relating to our national life.

"Problems in the university are all settled by considering what Lincoln would say about them," Dr. Hill explains. "We find that there is no question of today that can not be interpreted through the cosmic mind of Lincoln."

Proposed Lincoln Park

The university is the rusult of an expressed hope of Lincoln, Dr. Hill points out. In 1863 Lincoln said to General O. O. Howard, "If you ever come out of this horror alive, and I pray God that you may, I want you to do something for those mountain people who have been shut out of the world all these years."

Twenty five years ago Howard helped to establish the memorial university at Cumberland Gap to fulfill the request of his chief.

Now, Dr Hill says, there is a plan on foot to create a Lincoln National Park in this Cumberland Gap region. The scenery is inspiring. The location is appropriate, being the mountain region from which Lincoln came and which he never forgot. A bill to establish this park is to be introduced at the next session of congress and the chances of its enactment are said to be good.

This, of course, is another of the many of the great tributes to Lincoln. It is interesting to imagine what the rail splitter would think of all the tributes to him. Assuredly he would respond warmly to the remarkable memorial that is perhaps least generally known, the mountaineers' university at Cumberland Gap.

Make THE Backyard Pay

"Fresh vegetables from the garden every day in the year" is the slogan of garden enthusiasts the country over.

At first thought this would seem impossible, but by careful planning, planting and cultivation aided by the use of a small hotbed and a coldframe the seemingly impossible can be accomplished throughout that portion of the country where the winter climate is not too severe.

A small hotbed, consisting of concrete or brick walls covered by about four or five standard 3x6-foot hotbed sash can be built on the south side of the garage or attached directly to the side of the dwelling.

Heat for warming the bed can be supplied by a coil of pipe of a radiator connected to the house or garage heating system.

With the development of improved hot watner heaters, burning oil or hard coal, such as are used for heating poultry brooder houses, there is splendid oportunity for the development of beds.

The heater should in all cases be placed in a separate compartment or pit at the end of the hotbed on account of the danger of gases being given off which would injure the plants.

One of the best arrangements of the heating pipes is to have them on the walls of the bed just below the sash. In some cases the pit is made from four to six feet in depth and the heater pipes run underneath a floor which is supported upon a ledge built in the walls about 18 inches below the glass.

Fire heated beds may be used throughout the winter in mild climates for growing lettuce ,parsley, cress, dandelion and a few other of the more hardy salad crops.

Then to spring radishes, small tender beets and baby carrots, also what is known as "peelet" onions may be added to the list.

In addition to these crops grown for immediate use, early plants such as tomatoes, pepers, cabbage and cauliflower may be started in boxes and gotren ready for transplanting in the garden.

One of the important points in the management of a hotbed is to see that the temperature does not run too high.

Coldframes are nothing more than a hotbed without heat, that is, the frame and construction is practically the same and the bed is covered with sash the same as a hotbed.

The use of the coldframe, however, is just a little different from that of the hotbed.

Late in the winter when the sun is getting nearer and a greater degree of natural heat can be depended upon Such crops as lettuce, radishes, onions, and beets can be grown in a coldframe, especially is mats, straw, or some other covering is kept handy for throwing over the beds cold nights.

The coldframe is also especially useful for transplanting the early tomato and other plants started in the hotbed and for hardening these plants for outdoor conditions.

The hotbed and coldframe are important adjuncts to the home garden from the standpoint of starting early plants, but the gardener who has the time to devote to the care of a hotbed during the winter can have a lot of fun out of it and at the same time greatly extend the period of fresh vegetables on his table.

SURE IT DOES GOOD

Thedford's Black-Draught Liver Medicine (Vegetable) Praised by the Head of a Louisiana Family.

Lake Charles, La.—"I don't know what we would have done had we not had Black-Draught. It sure is one of the best medicines made, and am sure the best liver medicine," said Mr. Henry Garrett, of this city.

"My whole family uses it," continued Mr. Garrett. "My wife says she believes she kept off the 'flu' by taking doses of Black-Draught regularly.

"I, myself, use Black-Draught for indigestion, and it is fine.

"We used pills and tablets and other laxatives, but they never seemed to do us good, but the Black-Draught sure has, and it has come to our house to stay. We give it to our daughter for headache and torpid liver.

"I am glad to recommend anything that has been the help to my family that Black-Draught has.

"My present health is good. Have two boxes of Black-Draught in the house now."

If your liver gets out of fix, take Black-Draught. It will help to drive the bile poisons and other unhealthful matters out of your system.

VERBOTEN NOW FRENCH WORD

Germany Gets Tabloid Lesson "Might Is Right" in the Ruhr Situation

By Bob Dorman

Essen, Germany, March 23.—Germany is getting a tabloid lesson in the "might is right" policy of militarism.

What France needs, she takes And "Verboten" is still the watchword in the German Ruhr. But now it is a French and not a German watchword.

Hotels ,in whole or in part, are requisitioned for the use of officers of the French army of occupation in the Ruhr.

Schools are closed to make barracks for the troops.

Public and private buildings are seized for officers billets and for use as headquarters.

Should sudden need for autos arise, the French dragnet is spread on the roads throughout the Ruhr, and all autos of value are hustled to the nearest French headquarters.

I was with Dr. Grutzner, president of the Dusseldorf Province of the Rhine, as he went to Essen to address a meeting.

A short distance from Essen a heavy rope stretched across the road stopped the car and an armed guard took us to headquarters.

The car was held two hours, and then released—because it failed to meet the exacting requirements of the French automobile experts .

The French are enforcing an iron discipline on the people.

Cabarets and saloons must close at 11 o'clock; music is censored; also theatrical offerings; even public sidewalks where French sentries patrol are forbiddento the people.

Men who act serious all the time are considered funny.

The world gets better. You seldom see a man with the itch now.

"I Can't Save on My Salary"

Are you sure! We are becoming familiar with that excuse, and familiarity is breeding contempt.

You may honestly believe your salary won't stretch another point, but suppose, for instance, your rent was raised $10.00 a month. You would find a way to pay it. What if your salary was reduced $10.00 a month! You would find a way to make ends meet.

These things have happened, so it won't take much imagination on your part to make believe your rent has been raised, starting the first of the month. Then pay that $10.00 into a savings account and
